

Contents

Preface: Venturing Into an Uncivilized World	9
I. UnCivilization: Why the Emerging “Age Between the Powers” Offers Uncertainty and Opportunity	21
II. We Are All Strangers in a Strange Land	39
III. Flying With Confidence Into Change	47
IV. Flying With Black Swans	55
V. The Lemming Syndrome and Modern Human Society	67
VI. The Age of Terrorism Ends, Yet Terror Lives!	79
VII. Fear and Uncertainty Have Paths of Their Own	87
VIII. The New Geopolitics of Urban Societies	95
IX. Why Urban Societies Place Themselves at Risk.	117
X. The Thinning Crowds: How and Why Population Decline and Movement Will Re-Shape the Strategic Equation	123
XI. When Does Size Matter? The Positive and Negative Aspects of Scale in the Strategic Impact of Population Size	145
XII. The Emerging Shape of the World	155
XIII. The Wave Breaks, and the Age of Globalization Passes	165
XIV. “Urban Man” is Now “Energy Man”	173
XV. Heartlands, Rimlands, and Oceans: a New Age	187
XVI. As the World Changes: Cæsarism by Stealth	193
XVII. Thus Changes Empire, thus Democracy.	197
XVIII. The Future of Warfare: Why Some of the Next Important Conflicts Will Center on Our Cities, But be Fought in the Countrysides	203
XIX. The Binary Zimmerman: The historic and wider context of cyber warfare, and why it’s too important to let it be dominated by the technocrats.	221
XX. Can the “Supply Chain” Save Civilization?	231
XXI. Having a Future in Mind	247
XXII. Is Chaos Necessary?	253
XXIII. What is the Information Model for the Coming “Age of Chaos”?	259
XXIV. Renewal and Revival: A New World	267
XXV. The World at a Pivotal Point	283
XXVI. Epilogue: Empires, Like Snow Upon the Desert, Melt Away.	289
Bibliography	294
Other Books by This Author	297
Acknowledgments	299
A Note from the Author.	302
Index	303
Selected Glossary	304